General Citation Guidelines

Where can I find the Guidelines?

The rules are described in the General Citation Guidelines of the IU.
Here you can access many examples for citing according to APA 7th ed. a useful information on the use of figures and tables.

You can find the citation guidelines in MyCampus under Exam Guide > Additional Guides.

Updates: Usually there is a new version of the General Citation Guidelines published on October 1st and April 1st each year.

In-text Citations

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY OF APPLIED SCIENCES

An in-text citation is written in the following format: (Author, year, p. xy)

Example: “There is in fact evidence that changes in social practices, and even changes in temporary states of social orientation, can change the way people perceive and think” (Nisbett, 2003, p. 226).

If you have already mentioned the name of the author whose work you are quoting in the introductory sentence, you only need to state the year and page number in the brackets.

Example: Nisbett (2003, p. 226) explains that “changes in social practices, and even changes in temporary states of social orientation” have an impact on perception and thinking.

AI-Suggested References or Citations

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY OF APPLIED SCIENCES

AI chatbots and AI research assistants sometimes suggest references or entire citations.
Don't accept these without checking: does the source really exist? Do author, year, title and page number match?
AI tools occasionally invent references ("hallucination") – when in doubt, always verify the original source before citing it.

Any Questions?

The Library and Information Services offer guidance on the current IU General Citation Guidelines. Please read the General Citation Guidelines before making your enquiry!

In principle, citation and creating reference lists are part of the assignment and must be done independently.
